Multicultural Learning Expedition (EMI), Micro Credential(8 Credits)

HSS-U-MP-001

Admitted Academic Year：2026

Program's Descriptions：

This micro-program centers on introducing the societies and cultures of Taiwan' s Indigenous peoples and the Austronesian-speaking communities across the Pacific and Southeast Asia. Through multiple perspectives—archaeology, anthropology, architectural forms, material culture, law, and contemporary social issues—it seeks to re-examine the contributions of Indigenous knowledge to sustainable development (SDGs). In other words, by engaging with the survival wisdom of Austronesian peoples, the program encourages reflection on contemporary development goals, fostering critical thinking and possibilities for innovation.

The course aims to guide students toward a deeper understanding of the cultures of Taiwan' s Indigenous peoples, addressing the long-standing absence of Indigenous perspectives in mainstream narratives. It also seeks to cultivate students' sensitivity and empathy in cross-cultural understanding. Furthermore, by exploring the cultural experiences and social practices of Austronesian communities in other regions (such as the Pacific Islands and Southeast Asia), the program broadens students' international horizons. This helps them deepen their ability to comprehend diverse cultures in an ever-changing global context, and to develop international perspectives grounded in reflection and critical thinking.

Ultimately, this program aims to nurture students with strong cultural literacy, global understanding, and critical cultural thinking, thereby strengthening their knowledge base and reflective capacity in addressing issues of globalization and local cultures.
